LONDON, Dec. 2—Loss of the Australian cruiser Sydney and apparently her entire complement of 645 officers and men in a battle with an armed merchant raider which also was sunk off the Australian Coast was announced officially today.

(At Canberra, the Australian capital, Prime Minister John Curtin announced the full complement of 42 officers and 603 men aboard the Sydney are missing.)

British authorized sources revealed the Sydney's opponent in the sea engagement was the 9,400-ton S. S. Steiermark, known for some time as Raider No. 41, which had been sailing under the name of Kormoran.

Authorities said the Kormoran had been operating "under various disguises and various flags."

Authorities said the Steiermark carried at least six 5.9-inch guns, two aircraft and was equipped with underwater torpedo tubes in addition to those on deck. The merchant raider was said to be capable of a speed of 18 knots and carried a complement of 400 officers and men.

Authorities also revealed the Steiermark sank nine ships since it began operations.

A communique stated the 6,830-ton warship was "sunk in an action with a heavily armed merchant raider which the Sydney sank by gunfire."

German Drives On Two

KUIBYSHEV, USSR, Dec. 2—The Communist newspaper Pravda said today German attacks with three divisions on the Klin and Volokolamsk sectors outside Moscow had been repulsed by Russian forces.

Pravda said that while the enemy offensive was checked the situation at Klin and Volokolamsk remained "especially acute."

Operations were continuing with rising intensity in the Stalinogorsk area to the south of the capital, where Soviet mounted guards were reported advancing.

The newspaper Izvestia reported Soviet Gen. Kharitonov's troops on the Southern Front were continuing their advance on the Rostov sector. The account said a stubborn battle near the village of "B" ended with the Germans retreating, and added the Nazis now are 31 miles from Rostov.

A Pravda dispatch indicated the Russian operations west of Rostov were developing into a major counter-offensive designed to drive all axis forces from the eastern Ukraine.

The newspaper said that in "many sectors of the southern front the initiative has now passed into Soviet hands."

"According to the midnight war communique the advancing Soviet columns forcing the Nazis into retreat 100 miles west of Rostov already had captured "much booty."

BERLIN, Dec. 2—German authorities announced today that Reich forces on the Russian Front have made "new and deep penetrations in the Moscow defense system" and that fighting "in Rostov" is continuing.

New attempts by Red Army forces to break out of Leningrad were declared to have been repulsed with serious losses to the Soviets.

In North Africa, it was claimed, the action southeast of Tobruk was said to be continuing successfully for German and Italian troops.

INFORMATION ON SHIP MISSING, OFFICIALS SAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—United States Lines officials today said they had received no word concerning New York maritime circle's reports that the 4,900-ton freighter MacBeth, owned by the Maritime Commission and operated by the U. S. Lines under Panamanian registry, was missing in the North Atlantic.

The radio "blackout" imposed on vessels in belligerent areas of the high seas, prevents contact with the vessel, the officials said. According to the maritime reports, the MacBeth, formerly the Italian freighter Ida Z. O., was torpedoed.

LONDON sends the first picture of the dramatic sinking of the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal. The torpedoed ship is seen at right as it started to keel over a number of hours after it fell victim to an axis submarine in the Mediterranean Sea. CHURCHILL ADDS MANY TO ISLE'S EFFECTIVE LIST

LONDON, Dec. 2—In what he frankly termed a "harder turn of the screw," Prime Minister Winston Churchill today announced gigantic new mobilization of Britain's man and woman-power, increasing the nation's war effectiveness by 4,370,000 persons.

Men from 18½ to 50 henceforth will be liable for military service and the maximum may soon be increased to 61. Boys and girls between 16 and 18 will register for service of various sorts, while the government will seek authority to conscript all women over 18 if unmarried.

"A crisis in man-power and woman-power is at hand and will dominate the year 1942," the prime minister said.

Confident that the drastic new plans transforming virtually every eligible individual in the British Isles into a cog of the British war machine will be accepted with "cheerful, proud alacrity by all classes," Churchill revealed that 2,750,000 additional men and 1,620,000 more women will be made available for service.

"The government intends to ask to be released from its pledge that men under 20 will not be sent overseas in order to bring the army into line with the navy and air force," he said.

Two "vultures" necessitated these great added precautions, the prime minister said. One, he added, is the ever-present threat of invasion and the other that Hitler will soon again unleash the Luftwaffe against England "in all its fury."

DEFENDANT WILL TELL OWN TALE IN GIRL'S DEATH

FARMINGTON, Me., Dec. 2—Fred G. Wheeler, on trial for the murder of his 20-year-old sweetheart, Florence Buzzell, was prepared to take the stand today to round out the defense contention that blonde and beautiful "Buzzie" took her own life because he had broken off his affair with her.

As the trial was resumed today 23 defense witnesses had already testified for the ageing, well-to-do cattle dealer who is charged with shooting the girl to death in a hayfield last June on her brother's farm.

Some of these witnesses have testified that Florence was in poor health and despondent. Others said she loaded the target pistol with which she was shot shortly before she went for a walk in the hayfield where her body was found.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—A warning that war "will not settle the issue at stake in the Pacific" was issued today by Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura as the American-Japanese discussions were resumed at the State Department.

"I cannot believe that anybody wants war," the Japanese envoy said. "If we cannot settle the issues at stake by diplomacy, we should not try to settle them by war. War will not settle them."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—Having abandoned virtually all hope of reaching any understanding with Japan, the United States government is now discussing with the other members of the ABCD united front plans for concerted action to be taken if Nippon forces invade Thailand or attempt to cut the Burma Road.

There is a growing belief in diplomatic quarters in Washington today that a Japanese move into Thailand is likely to result in a state of undeclared war between the western powers and the Nippon Empire in the Far East.

Great Britain is discussing with the United States the possible use of empire forces in British Malaya to check any Japanese attack on Thailand.

Plans also are being discussed for an Anglo-American aerial convoy system to protect the Burma Road if Japan launches a serious aerial attack on that lifeline for American aid to China.

Details of this convoy system are being kept secret, but it is believed the conveying may be started by American aviators who were temporarily relieved from active duty with the U. S. Army Air (Continued on Page Two)

Risks Taken By Firemen, Volunteers

Dangerous Work Of Chief
And Clifton Youth
Draws Applause

Stories of the risks taken by regular and volunteer firemen at Monday night's fire, while they worked in close range of the 20,000 gallon tanks of gasoline, were being circulated throughout the city Tuesday.

The favorite was that concerning George Clifton, 18, of East Ohio Street, and Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who braved the flames to turn off the draining tanks. Damage might have been twice as great had it continued to burn.

The gasoline drained from a two inch outlet and the kerosene from a three inch outlet at the end of each tank. While the fire chief and the youth worked their way to the tanks, firemen kept water pouring on them from two lines of hose. Steam was visible as the cold water struck their bodies (Continued on Page Two)

FIVE CITIES IN DARKNESS AS WIRING MELTS

Damage Of $10,000 Estimated After
Fuel Flames Destroy Trucks, Much
Of Circleville Firm's Property

STATIC ELECTRICITY IS BLAMED

Lights, Power Service Disrupted For
Three Hours Monday Evening; Chief,
Youth Shut Off Valve From Tank

Drama which told of a $10,000 blaze, of danger and heroism and of disrupted power lines which plunged five cities into three hours of darkness, was staged in a setting of flaming gasoline at the west edge of the city late Monday evening.

Destroyed by the fire were three Circleville Oil Company tank trucks, the company's garage and small service station, uncounted gallons of gasoline and kerosene and two privately owned automobiles.

Circleville, Hillsboro, Jackson, Chillicothe and Waverly experienced total black-outs when lead wires above the flames melted and snapped.

Cause of the fire, according to Leslie D. May, manager of the Circleville Oil Company, apparently was static electricity, which ignited gasoline as it flowed from one of the company's 20,000-gallon tanks into a company truck.

Truck Driver William Carter of Williamsport pulled in beside the tanks about 4:40 p. m. to have his truck refilled at the close of his day's run. There were about 145 gallons of gasoline left in the truck, he said.

Arthur Steele, who is in charge of the supply tanks, climbed to the running board of the truck, removed the caps on the top of the truck's tanks and placed lines in the gasoline and kerosene compartments.

Flames Break Out

As the gasoline began to flow into the truck there was a sudden burst of flames. "I don't know what happened," Steele exclaimed. "The fire seemed to spurt out around the dome behind me and the whole truck was afire." The motor of the truck was not running, Carter said.

Elmer Wolf, who owns a barn just west of the oil company's tanks, noticed the flames over the top of the company garage and called the fire department. Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who operates a garage a short distance away, also noticed the blaze before the alarm was sounded.

While the truck burned, gasoline poured from the two inch line and kerosene from the three inch line leading from the tanks. The fire spread rapidly into the company garage where two more tank trucks, filled and ready to start out the next day, were stored for the night. Both exploded as the flames began to crawl into the building, throwing flaming gasoline into the air and along the ground. Two automobiles, one owned by Ted Steele and the other by David Dunkle, both company employes, were next to go.

Barn Threatened

Several times the flames crawled to within a few feet of Elmer Wolf's barn, but firemen fought it back, pouring nearly 400 gallons of water a minute from four lines of hose, into two sides of the fire.

About twenty minutes after the fire started, the three lead power lines melted and went down in a shower of sparks, leaving the city without light or power until 8:30 p. m., when Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company employes succeeded in repairing them.

The township fire truck was pulled in on the west side of the fire and it appeared that firemen were in for an all night battle as the gasoline and kerosene continued to flow out of the tanks. The big 20,000 gallon tank of gasoline nearest the fire at times was almost enveloped in the flames. Underground were three other tanks, each carrying 5,000 gallons of gasoline.

Chief, Youth Act
Then, while the flames lapped at both the 20,000 gallon containers, eighteen-year-old George Clifton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Clifton, 225 East Ohio Street, and Chief Wise worked their way through the heat to the tanks. The Clifton youth held a ten-foot (Continued on Page Two)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—Presi-

Morse announced that terms of was learned from reliable sources, however, that the terms would in-raise for members of the operat-unions, plus some adjustments on vacations with pay for clerical, of-

The increases are expected to cost the railroads about $300,000,

30 percent wage increases, while the 14 unions had asked raises of

FIVE CITIES IN DARKNESS AS WIRING MELTS

Damage Of $10,000 Estimated After
Fuel Flames Destroy Trucks, Much
Of Circleville Firm's Property

STATIC ELECTRICITY IS BLAMED

Lights, Power Service Disrupted For
Three Hours Monday Evening; Chief,
Youth Shut Off Valve From Tank

Drama which told of a $10,000 blaze, of danger and heroism and of disrupted power lines which plunged five cities into three hours of darkness, was staged in a setting of flaming gasoline at the west edge of the city late Monday evening.

Destroyed by the fire were three Circleville Oil Company tank trucks, the company's garage and small service station, uncounted gallons of gasoline and kerosene and two privately owned automobiles.

Circleville, Hillsboro, Jackson, Chillicothe and Waverly experienced total black-outs when lead wires above the flames melted and snapped.

Cause of the fire, according to Leslie D. May, manager of the Circleville Oil Company, apparently was static electricity, which ignited gasoline as it flowed from one of the company's 20,000-gallon tanks into a company truck.

Truck Driver William Carter of Williamsport pulled in beside the tanks about 4:40 p. m. to have his truck refilled at the close of his day's run. There were about 145 gallons of gasoline left in the truck, he said.

Arthur Steele, who is in charge of the supply tanks, climbed to the running board of the truck, removed the caps on the top of the truck's tanks and placed lines in the gasoline and kerosene compartments.

Flames Break Out

As the gasoline began to flow into the truck there was a sudden burst of flames. "I don't know what happened," Steele exclaimed. "The fire seemed to spurt out around the dome behind me and the whole truck was afire." The motor of the truck was not running, Carter said.

Elmer Wolf, who owns a barn just west of the oil company's tanks, noticed the flames over the top of the company garage and called the fire department. Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who operates a garage a short distance away, also noticed the blaze before the alarm was sounded.

While the truck burned, gasoline poured from the two inch line and kerosene from the three inch line leading from the tanks. The fire spread rapidly into the company garage where two more tank trucks, filled and ready to start out the next day, were stored for the night.
Both exploded as the flames began to crawl into the building, throwing flaming gasoline into the air and along the ground. Two automobiles, one owned by Ted Steele and the other by David Dunkle, both company employees, were next to go.

Barn Threatened

Several times the flames crawled to within a few feet of Elmer Wolf's barn, but firemen fought it back, pouring nearly 400 gallons of water a minute from four lines of hose, into two sides of the fire.

About twenty minutes after the fire started, the three lead power lines melted and went down in a shower of sparks, leaving the city without light or power until 8:30 p. m., when Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company employees succeeded in repairing them.

The township fire truck was pulled in on the west side of the fire and it appeared that firemen were in for an all night battle as the gasoline and kerosene continued to flow out of the tanks. The big 20,000 gallon tank of gasoline nearest the fire at times was almost enveloped in the flames. Underground were three other tanks, each carrying 5,000 gallons of gasoline.

Chief, Youth Act

Then, while the flames lapped at both the 20,000 gallon containers, eighteen-year-old George Clifton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Clifton, 225 East Ohio Street, and Chief Wise worked their way through the heat to the tanks.
The Clifton youth held a ten-foot

"According to information received from the Australian naval board, H. M. A. S. Sydney has been in action with a heavily armed merchant raider which was sunk by gunfire."

"The information was obtained from survivors from the enemy ship who were picked up some time after the action."

The Sydney, one of the most active British units in the war, participated in the July 19, 1940 engagement with Italian warships off northwest Crete, in which the Fascist light cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni was sunk.

When the Australian warship returned to her home port last winter after a year's duty at sea, she had covered an aggregate 80,000 miles, survived 60 bombing attacks, and fired over 4,000 shells.

Mayor-elect Ben Gordon, who operates his accessory business two blocks from the fire scene, had an auxiliary hose ready to pour water on the roof of his store in case of an explosion hurled the flaming fuel.

Joseph Horst, Circleville High School faculty member, really concentrates when he works. With a lot of school work to get out of the way, he put some lighted candles beside him while he went about his duties. Two hours after the light system was back in operation, the instructor was still working by candlelight.

ladder while Wise climbed up and turned off the valves on both tanks. Firemen played two streams of water on both the chief and the youth to keep their clothes from igniting.

With the oil shut off from the tanks, the flames died down rapidly and in a few minutes the fire was under control. Light company employees mended the wires and at 8:30 p. m. the power came back on.

Mr. May estimated that about 10,000 gallons of gasoline and 7,000 gallons of kerosene were burned.

The three tank trucks destroyed were valued at $1,500 each, the garage building at $1,800, three electric gasoline pumps at $400 each, housing for the pumps, $350; cash register, $200; electric pumps which move gasoline from tanks to the trucks, two valued at $300 each, and much other equipment the value of which has not been determined. Additional loss includes the Steele and Dunkle cars and the gasoline and kerosene.

Firemen laid a total of 1,500 feet of hose and pressure continued fairly steady at 55 pounds.

Trains Held Up

Three freight trains on the Norfolk & Western railroad, one westbound and two eastbound, were held up for an hour and a half during the fire. Railroad officials said they did not wish to risk running through the flames with a danger of igniting flammable materials which might be carried in the cars.

Thick black smoke made the fire visible for considerable distance outside Circleville. A large crowd gathered around the fire, many risking their lives by approaching within a few yards of the flaming tanks.

ladder while Wise climbed up and turned off the valves on both tanks. Firemen played two streams of water on both the chief and the youth to keep their clothes from igniting.

With the oil shut off from the tanks, the flames died down rapidly and in a few minutes the fire was under control. Light company employees mended the wires and at 8:30 p. m. the power came back on.

Mr. May estimated that about 10,000 gallons of gasoline and 7,000 gallons of kerosene were burned.

The three tank trucks destroyed were valued at $1,500 each, the garage building at $1,800, three electric gasoline pumps at $400 each, housing for the pumps, $350; cash register, $200; electric pumps which move gasoline from tanks to the trucks, two valued at $300 each, and much other equipment the value of which has not been determined. Additional loss includes the Steele and Dunkle cars and the gasoline and kerosene.

Firemen laid a total of 1,500 feet of hose and pressure continued fairly steady at 55 pounds.

Three freight trains on the Norfolk & Western railroad, one westbound and two eastbound, were held up for an hour and a half during the fire. Railroad officials said they did not wish to risk running through the flames with a danger of igniting flammable materials which might be carried in the cars.

Thick black smoke made the fire visible for considerable distance outside Circleville. A large crowd gathered around the fire, many risking their lives by approaching within a few yards of the flaming tanks.

The Circleville Oil Company continued its operations Tuesday despite the disastrous fire, other

FIVE MEN KILLED IN PETROLEUM EXPLOSION

OKMULGEE, Okla., Dec. 2—Five men were dead and several others remained in critical condition today following an explosion and fire at the Phillips Petroleum Corporation plant on the outskirts of Okmulgee.

Officials of the company said explosion of a pressure tank set off the holocaust when flames from the heating fire below the tank ignited leaking fumes. Two nearby tanks also were blown up, shooting flames hundreds of feet in the air.

One employee, James Hawk, was killed instantly in the explosion, and the other victims died of burns. They were Hippolyte Decobert Jr., Clarence Steighner, Lewis Pope and John Rogers.

Firemen battled the fire for six hours before the flames were controlled, and for a time it was feared a fourth tank might explode. As a precautionary measure, the fire-fighters evacuated a ten-block area around the plant.

Fifteen men were injured, but only four were believed in serious condition.

SUICIDE PLAN OF BOY HELD IN PRISON FAILS

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 2—An alleged suicide device of 17-year-old Ray Kennedy, serving a year's term on the Multnomah County rock pile at Rocky Butte for larceny, proved interesting but ineffective today.

Kennedy drilled a hole in a boulder, inserted a quarter stick of dynamite, sat on the rock and lit the fuse. With a muffled roar the boulder disappeared—but Kennedy remained.

Jailers, after ascertaining that their prisoner wasn't even scratched, sternly informed him that they frowned upon use of explosive to demolish the rocks, preferring prisoners to use the old-fashioned sledge hammer.

Also invited to join Bing Crosby's exuberant group is Carol Landis, young blonde movie star, currently appearing in "Moon over Miami."

JUDY, CHARLIE'S GUEST

"My little Gumm drop" always heretofore has been Charlie's way of referring to Judy, whose real name is Gumm.

THIS PACIFIC TROUBLE

DEFINITE foreign trouble for America breaks, as most of us have expected, in the Far East. We are considerably involved in the Atlantic, and that involvement may grow until it becomes the main issue; but the first clear challenge to us comes from Japan. So our national attention, confused elsewhere, now turns clearly to that quarter.

It is rather surprising, how unanimous our national feeling is toward the Japanese and how prepared our public mind appears for a conflict there. This is not the result of propaganda, either. It is the Tokyo militarists and navalists themselves who, by their truculence and arrogance, have convinced our people, along with their own, that war is inevitable. Now at last, and with vast regret, we prepare to meet the challenge.

This challenge is in itself a confession of bad faith and failure on the part of the Japanese government. The warmongers seem to be bringing things to a head because they have built up an unnecessary war machine which has bankrupted their country and threatens to destroy the ruling class. Not only are those militarists enormously ambitious and arrogant, but they must fear revolution unless they can produce victories. And they may prolong their domination in that way—for a little while.

It is well for us ourselves not to be overconfident. There will be grief for us. But it is impossible to see how the challengers can win, with the vast odds against them.

BETTER THAN SLOGANS

RESTAURANT proprietors agree with the doctors who are disturbed by the current all-out craze for vitamins. They find their guests are suffering acute attacks of "mineral madness" and "vitamin jitters". They propose to do something about it.

Mrs. Alice H. Smith, nutritionist and home economics teacher, suggests that "bright, witty slogans and statements" be put on menu cards to encourage and instruct diners in good eating habits without stressing vitamins and minerals.

The public can probably bear this, particularly if the slogans turn out to be really bright and witty. But the restaurant people could accomplish their good purpose without such wiles. All they need to do is to continue to serve well-prepared food in attractive surroundings and with skillful service. Patrons will flock to them and eat the dietetically correct meals without ever noticing anything except how good the food is.

It's a shame to say it, but at last we begin to see the Finnish finish.

Up to find a pea soup fog enfolding the ville. All cars with lights ashine, and many the headlight left burning when cars were stopped. Turning them off at night is a habit; leaving them burning in the daytime is almost a certainty. Noted a great pile of Christmas packages at the post, all going away.

Planned to attend the Ohio Select List meet at Columbus, but all through the morning unexpected events prevented departure. Some days are like that. Stopped by two subscribers who urged that I impress on carrier boys the necessity of putting papers on porches, particularly at this time of year. Ladies and gentlemen, I have been doing that lecturing for many, many years, and still some papers land right in the mud or snow. I have yet to figure out whether it is bad aim or intention. Maybe it is just boy. But on the whole they do pretty good, probably a lot better than you and I did as kids if we carried papers. I think that a certain way of getting the paper on the porch would be to place there an effigy of Hitler and then tell the boys that their rolled papers are bombs.

Was at City Hall in the late afternoon when that fire started at the Circleville Oil Co. bulk plant. Went there and after viewing flames around those two great gasoline tanks did decide anew that a newspaperman's duty is to handle the story, not be listed among the victims. So I headed for a spot two blocks away and there chatted with Clark Will, Herman Hill et al. Quite a blaze and nothing much that the firemen could do except prevent spread to surrounding buildings. Water has no effect on burning gasoline. Everyone, it seemed, was in the vicinity.

Home to dinner illuminated by candlelight, and not too many at that. Talked some about olden times and expressed wonder that folk were able to get along without electricity. We cook and sweep and refrigerate by current as well as see. Headed downtown and again stood in the

UNIONS INCORPORATE?

WASHINGTON—Two matters were discussed at the White House—congressional conference on anti-strike legislation, not revealed in the published reports of the meeting.

One was a proposal to incorporate labor unions and require them to reveal their financial records. The other was a secret ballot on strike action.

The President approved the first, but turned down the second.

He declared that he favored unions making public their revenues and expenditures, just as business concerns are required to do. This, he said, would do much to drive racketeers and other undesirable elements out of unions; also, put a curb on one man or group control.

However, Roosevelt urged that this curb be extended to include other public bodies, such as the America First Committee and Fight For Freedom.

"The public is entitled to know," he said, "where they are getting their money and how and for what they are spending it."

The President voiced doubt about the advisability of a compulsory secret strike vote, on the ground that this did not necessarily insure a free ballot. Also, he said, it might backfire against the government.

He pointed out that if a vote held by edict of law favored a strike in an important defense industry, then the government would be in the position of sanctioning the shutdown. It was Roosevelt's opinion that the way to block strikes was to prevent them from occurring.

HEIL HITLER

When the son of an American diplomat rises in an American school and cries, "Heil Hitler!"—that's news. But that's exactly what happened in Washington recently.

The youngster had been sent to German schools while his father was stationed in Germany, and he was obliged to raise his hand with the other children, and cry, "Heil Hitler!"

But when U. S. consuls were cleared out of Germany, this boy became a student in Washington. His English is a little rough, and the teachers one day noticed he did not know the words of the "Salute to the Flag." She coached him, and he tried again, but with this unhappy result:

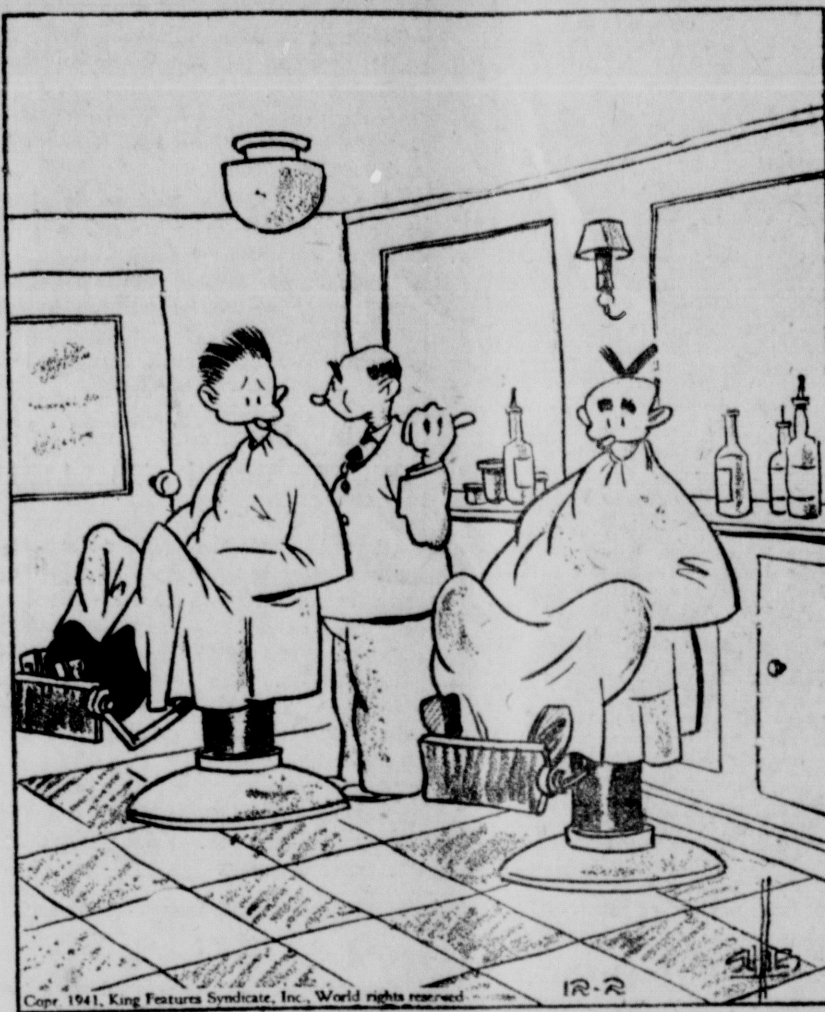

"I pledge allegiance to the flag. . . . And here he raised his hand and cried, "Heil Hitler!"

Charles Edison, ex-Secretary of the Navy, now Governor of New Jersey, is proud of one thing: the destroyer Kearny did not sink. It was one of the destroyers he built while handling construction in the navy, and at a time when he was under criticism for top-heavy destroyers. But Edison put so many water-tight compartments into the new speed-demons that they are almost unsinkable. . . . Unlike Secretary of the Navy Knox, a newspaper publisher, Secretary of the Navy Edison welcomed press criticism. When newspapers reported flaws in destroyer design, he took the position that criticism was a healthy thing. . . . Lovely Mrs. Lionell Atwill, greeting

Comparative Health of City and Farm

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● Browning wrote a poem called "Up in a Villa—Down in the City" describing the pleasures of farm life as contrasted with the pleasures of city life. I, less poetic,

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

more practical than Browning, would like to approach the subject from the standpoint of hygiene and consider the comparative healthfulness of life down on the farm and up in the city.

There are lots of people who like to live down on the farm and I personally am glad there are because I would be extremely unhappy on a real sure-enough operating farm.

One of the arguments that is advanced in favor of farm life is that it is more healthful and to a certain extent the recent figures compiled by Dr. James J. Short of the New York Postgraduate Medical School indicate that this might be true.

Recent Figures

Tobacco: Fifty-seven per cent of rural people and 68 per cent of city dwellers use tobacco.

Alcohol: Forty-two per cent of rural and 60 per cent of city dwellers use alcohol.

In the case of both tobacco and alcohol, life in the city leads to greater temptation.

Effects of high pressure living: About 3 per cent of rural as contrasted with 7 per cent of city dwellers have a pulse rate of 90 or more. This might be interpreted to mean the pressure of life in the city. Tremors are more than twice as frequent in the city.

But 3½ per cent of rural and only 2½ per cent of urban dwellers have enlarged hearts.

Heart murmur occurred in 3½ per cent of rural people and 4½ per cent of city dwellers.

Lung disease occurred in 2½ per cent in the country and 3 per cent in the city. This, of course, is mostly tuberculosis. There is a surprisingly small difference.

Eight per cent rural and 9 per cent urban need glasses.

Nearly 6 per cent rural and 3 per cent urban dwellers have infected tonsils. This is probably due to better access to medical care in the city.

More germs seem to get into the bodies of city dwellers as noted by the rather undue rate of enlargement of lymphatic nodes. Thyroid enlargements were practically identical. High blood pressure is practically the same in both.

There is the same amount of hernia and hemorrhoids in both groups.

Two conclusions might be drawn from the figures. First: that the pressure of life in the city is not such that it would affect health unduly and second that the medical conditions in the country are sufficient to prevent conditions of gross neglect.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. B. M.: "Is surgery the only cure for a cystic ovary?"

Answer: Yes.

Worried: "What causes one to sniff continually when sitting reading, or indeed when awake?"

Answer: Probably a mild case of sinus infection of the nose causes the sniffing.

W. F. P.: "What is your opinion regarding a woman past thirty years bearing children?"

Answer: Under conditions of the modern science of obstetrics, a woman from thirty to thirty-five years of age does have a harder time with her first baby than a woman of twenty.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clending has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

SUSAN went into the bedroom, leaving Roy and Irene alone after telling that young man how dependable he was.

"Dependable, my eye!" said Irene.

"Don't start all over again," Roy warned. "This is no place for personalities."

"Only those Miss Typical Farmer's Daughter pulls, I suppose," said Irene. "And what's this about you going to Staten Island?"

"We're going to Staten Island, Susan and I—that's all," Roy replied. "Susan wants a glimpse of the water and the boats and the skyline."

"While you," said Irene, "feast your eyes upon her."

"Now listen, Irene, you—"

"Oh, come on, let's get out of here," Irene said crossly. "I can't stand much more of this Dumb Dora, farmer's daughter stuff. It's got me down." She walked out into the hall. "I only pray she doesn't overdo it on the air, and make her listeners a little ill."

"What do you mean, overdo it?" said Roy. "The girl's only being herself."

"I wonder," said Irene. "Roy, frowning, watched her disappear down the hall."

Sometimes Irene was too cryptic for him, he admitted. And at times she was also unreasonable and unmanageable. She even made him feel a bit scared and uncertain at times—and one of those times was right now.

Susan rejoined him. "Do I look all right?" she asked. "Perfect!" said Roy.

They went out into the hall, where Irene stood impatiently tapping the floor with the toe of her shoe.

There followed several hectic hours during which Susan was rushed here, and rushed there, forced to talk herself and listen to others talk—and then she found herself on board the ferryboat, American Legion as it chugged across the bay. She and Roy Leonard stood upon the upper deck, with the wind in their faces. They were silent for a moment, watching Staten Island come nearer and nearer.

"Well," said Roy, "you've certainly seen a lot of boats."

"Haven't I?" said Susan. "But it makes me a little sad—seeing those United States flags painted upon their sides. It brings the war so close to home."

"Yes, it does," Roy agreed. "But let's not think of that. Let's think about how nice it is that we've got daylight saving time." He chuckled. "After all, that IS something to be

Susan turned her eyes toward Bedloe's Island.

"A lady with a lamp," she said softly. "How wonderful it would be if she could really light the whole world to freedom and liberty. She must look lovely when she's all lighted up."

"Well see her that way on our way back," Roy said. "I prefer her when she's lighted by the sun only. She looks a bit garish when all her electric trimmings are turned on."

Susan took Roy's arm.

"Let's take a walk around the deck," she said. "I've always wanted to do that on a huge ocean liner. I'll probably never have the opportunity, so now we'll make the American Legion do."

"I've never been abroad either," said Roy, as they fell into step. "But I've often taken this trip—I like it. Especially at dusk, when you can see the lights of lower Manhattan through a silvery veil of mist or fog."

"Do you suppose," said Susan, "that folk will ever again be able to sail for France, England—fascinating places across the sea?"

"Let's hope so," Roy answered. "Meanwhile, they'll have a chance to see their own country. It's not at all a bad place, you know."

"I should say not!" Susan said. "I'm seeing it now, thanks to Dainty Diana Dairies. She looked up at Roy. "Tell me about the town you came from. I tried to get you to do it back in that little restaurant where we had dinner—but you kept changing the subject."

"That," said Roy, "was because I wanted to hear you talk. And dancing with you was so nice—I didn't want to spoil it by talking about myself. Did you like dining there?"

"I should say so!" Susan told him. "It made me feel that I was really in New York. I've often read about those quaint little places in stories."

"A lot of them are just fakes," Roy said. "But the one we visited does seem to have something. I often get advertising ideas when I go there."

Susan laughed softly. "There you go, trying to change the subject again!" she accused. "Now, about this small town where you used to live."

"It was like thousands of other small towns, I imagine," Roy began. "Wide, tree-shaded streets that are dusty on a hot summer afternoon—places where kids like I was could dig their toes. Whip-poorwill in the evening—still, black nights. And boys and girls dreaming of what they wanted to be." He stopped speaking for a moment. "But it was Grandmother's farm I especially loved."

"What was it like?" Susan asked.

"Not a large one," said Roy. "Nothing like the Farmer plantation. But plenty big enough to impress a boy in his teens. I used to tell my grandmother that when I'd made my fortune I'd come back and take care of both the farm and her."

"Is that still your plan?"

"No. Grandmother died the year after I came to New York and the farm had to be sold."

"Oh, I'm sorry!"

"But I'm hoping to rent or buy a place in Connecticut," Roy continued. "A place where I can plant things and raise chickens. Maybe we'll get a chance to drive up there."

"I'd love to see it," Susan said. And then: "It seems odd that you should have gone into the advertising business, when you seem so fond of the country and farms."

"I had to make a living," said Roy. "And soon after I got a job with Dainty Diana Dairies, I sort of drifted into advertising. I'm glad now that I did." He looked down into Susan's eyes. "The combination of farm background and advertising is responsible for the contest which you've won. But what pleases me more than anything else is that seeing you, meeting you and hearing you talk, convinces me that there still are girls in the world who are natural and aren't trying to pretend to be something they are not."

Susan tried to think of something to say, and couldn't. But her heart sank. If there ever was a pretender, she was it. Not that she wasn't really a farmer's daughter. No, not that. But she was putting on an act. There was no getting around that. And she felt a little sick about it, now that she realized how completely Roy Leonard had fallen for the line she had adopted. For a brief moment she was tempted to tell him the truth—beginning with the evening when she and Fred Mosher had listened to the radio in Fred's car. She was tempted to tell him everything—even about her four-year college course, when she had won high honors, not leaving out the part about how she had been voted the most sophisticated girl in her class. She was even tempted to start speaking to Roy in French, or Italian, or Spanish. She knew that deep down inside of her she was an essentially honest person—and all of a sudden it was hard for her not to open up her heart and make a complete confession.

But she couldn't.

A happy, busy, prosperous year lies ahead of the persons who have birthdays today. Domestic matters are to the fore, but they should run no unnecessary risks in correspondence or travel. The child who is born on this date will be very much attached to his or her old associations and friends. Their goodwill will bring such a one gain and valuable assistance, which will also come through superiors. Strangers, however, may cause trouble.

THIS PACIFIC TROUBLE
DEFINITE foreign trouble for America breaks, as most of us have expected, in the Far East. We are considerably involved in the Atlantic, and that involvement may grow until it becomes the main issue; but the first clear challenge to us comes from Japan. So our national attention, confused elsewhere, now turns clearly to that quarter.

It is rather surprising, how unanimous our national feeling is toward the Japanese and how prepared our public mind appears for a conflict there. This is not the result of propaganda, either. It is the Tokyo militarists and navalists themselves who, by their truculence and arrogance, have convinced our people, along with their own, that war is inevitable. Now at last, and with vast regret, we prepare to meet the challenge.

This challenge is in itself a confession of bad faith and failure on the part of the Japanese government. The warmongers seem to be bringing things to a head because they have built up an unnecessary war machine which has bankrupted their country and threatens to destroy the ruling class. Not only are those militarists enormously ambitious and arrogant, but they must fear revolution unless they can produce victories. And they may prolong their domination in that way—for a little while.

It is well for us ourselves not to be overconfident. There will be grief for us. But it is impossible to see how the challengers can win, with the vast odds against them.

BETTER THAN SLOGANS
RESTAURANT proprietors agree with the doctors who are disturbed by the current all-out craze for vitamins. They find their guests are suffering acute attacks of "mineral madness" and "vitamin jitters". They propose to do something about it.

Mrs. Alice H. Smith, nutritionist and home economics teacher, suggests that "bright, witty slogans and statements" be put on menu cards to encourage and instruct diners in good eating habits without stressing vitamins and minerals.

The public can probably bear this, particularly if the slogans turn out to be really bright and witty. But the restaurant people could accomplish their good purpose without such wiles. All they need to do is to continue to serve well-prepared food in attractive surroundings and with skillful service. Patrons will flock to them and eat the dietetically correct meals without ever noticing anything except how good the food is.

It's a shame to say it, but at last we begin to see the Finnish finish.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:
Up to find a pea soup fog enfolding the ville. All cars with lights ashine, and many the headlight left burning when cars were stopped. Turning them off at night is a habit; leaving them burning in the daytime is almost a certainty. Noted a great pile of Christmas packages at the post, all going away.
Planned to attend the Ohio Select List meet at Columbus, but all through the morning unexpected events prevented departure. Some days are like that. Stopped by two subscribers who urged that I impress on carrier boys the necessity of putting papers on porches, particularly at this time of year. Ladies and gentlemen, I have been doing that lecturing for many, many years, and still some papers land right in the mud or snow. I have yet to figure out whether it is bad aim or intention. Maybe it is just joy. But on the whole they do pretty good, probably a lot better than you and I did as kids if we carried papers. I think that a certain way of getting the paper on the porch would be to place there an effigy of Hitler and then tell the boys that their rolled papers are bombs.

Was at City Hall in the late afternoon when that fire started at the Circleville Oil Co. bulk plant. Went there and after viewing flames around those two great gasoline tanks did decide anew that a newspaperman's duty is to handle the story, not be listed among the victims. So I headed for a spot two blocks away and there chatted with Clark Will, Herman Hill et al. Quite a blaze and nothing much that the firemen could do except prevent spread to surrounding buildings. Water has no effect on burning gasoline. Everyone, it seemed, was in the vicinity.
Home to dinner illuminated by candlelight, and not too many at that. Talked some about olden times and expressed wonder that folk were able to get along without electricity. We cook and sweep and refrigerate by current as well as see. Headed downtown and again stood in the rain as the flames finally died down and then went out as valves in the big gas tank were turned. Everything dark then and quite desolate. Folk just stood around somewhat lost.

Found my wagon and headed downtown. Narrowly escaped two crashes and finally made Bish Given's filling station. Sat there in the darkness and watched the Main and Scioto intersection and in twenty minutes saw five narrowly averted accidents, two of which could have been really serious. Then, through the business district, hoping that a hardware store would be open and that I might be able to find a gasoline lantern, but all stores were dark.
Just a sample of what a war blackout can be or an economy blackout toward which we are heading about the first of the year. I know very well I will not like it, and I don't think others will, either. Last night taught me this much, anyway: Our traffic lights must be kept burning at all costs. That, or we will be required to enlarge our hospital.

UNIONS INCORPORATE?

WASHINGTON—Two matters were discussed at the White House—congressional conference on anti-strike legislation, not revealed in the published reports of the meeting.

One was a proposal to incorporate labor unions and require them to reveal their financial records. The other was a secret ballot on strike action.

The President approved the first, but turned down the second.

He declared that he favored unions making public their revenues and expenditures, just as business concerns are required to do. This, he said, would do much to drive racketeers and other undesirable elements out of unions; also, put a curb on one man or group control.

However, Roosevelt urged that this curb be extended to include other public bodies, such as the America First Committee and Fight For Freedom.

"The public is entitled to know," he said, "where they are getting their money and how and for what they are spending it."

The President voiced doubt about the advisability of a compulsory secret strike vote, on the ground that this did not necessarily insure a free ballot. Also, he said, it might backfire against the government.

He pointed out that if a vote held by edict of law favored a strike in an important defense industry, then the government would be in the position of sanctioning the shutdown. It was Roosevelt's opinion that the way to block strikes was to prevent them from occurring.

HEIL HITLER

When the son of an American diplomat rises in an American school and cries, "Heil Hitler!" — that's news. But that's exactly what happened in Washington recently.

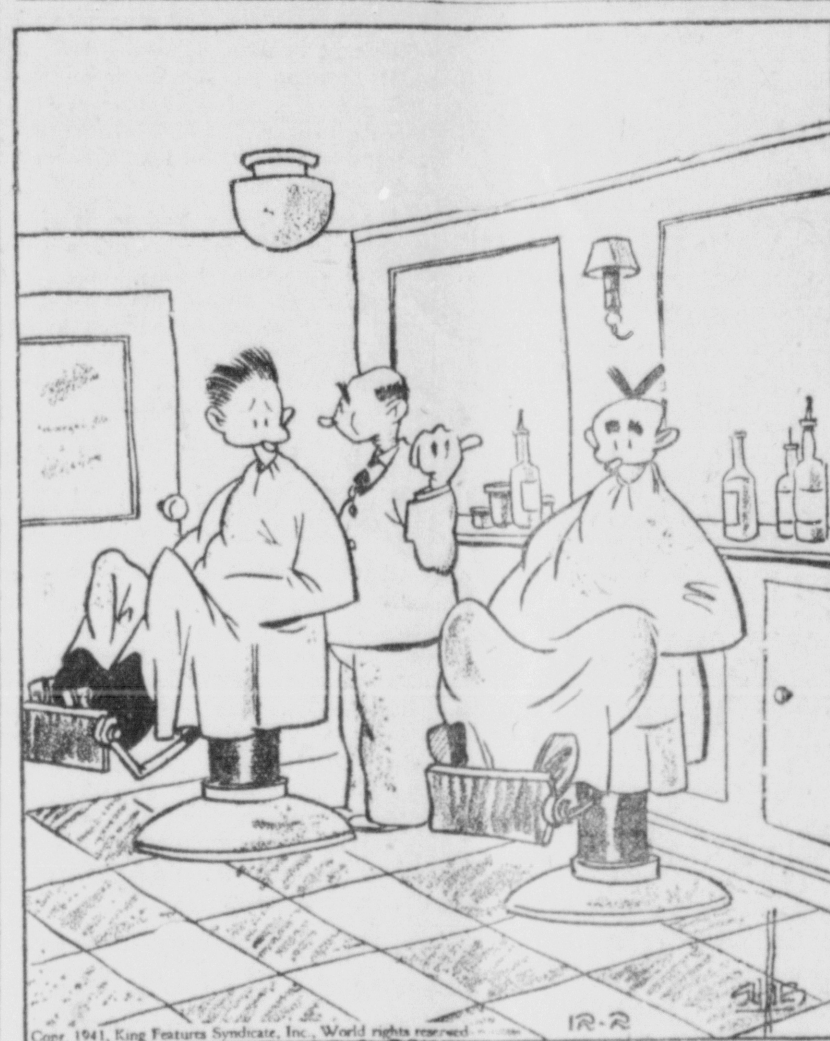

The youngster had been sent to German schools while his father was stationed in Germany, and he was obliged to raise his hand with the other children, and cry, "Heil Hitler!"

But when U. S. consuls were cleared out of Germany, this boy became a student in Washington. His English is a little rough, and the teachers one day noticed he did not know the words of the "Salute to the Flag." She coached him, and he tried again, but with this unhappy result:
"I pledge allegiance to the flag. . . . And here he raised his hand and cried, "Heil Hitler!"

But Edison put so many water-tight compartments into the new speed-demons that they are almost unsinkable. . . . Unlike Secretary of the Navy Knox, a newspaper publisher, Secretary of the Navy Edison welcomed press criticism. Comparative Health of City and Farm

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
● Browning wrote a poem called "Up in a Villa—Down in the City" describing the pleasures of farm life as contrasted with the pleasures of city life. I, less poetic, Dr. Clendinging will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

more practical than Browning, would like to approach the subject from the standpoint of hygiene and consider the comparative healthfulness of life down on the farm and up in the city.

There are lots of people who like to live down on the farm and I personally am glad there are because I would be extremely unhappy on a real sure-enough operating farm.

One of the arguments that is advanced in favor of farm life is that it is more healthful and to a certain extent the recent figures compiled by Dr. James J. Short of the New York Postgraduate Medical School indicate that this might be true.

Recent Figures
Tobacco: Fifty-seven per cent of rural people and 68 per cent of city dwellers use tobacco.
Alcohol: Forty-two per cent of rural and 60 per cent of city dwellers use alcohol.
In the case of both tobacco and alcohol, life in the city leads to greater temptation.
Effects of high pressure living: About 3 per cent of rural as contrasted with 7 per cent of city dwellers have a pulse rate of 90 or more. This might be interpreted to mean the pressure of life in the city. Tremors are more than twice as frequent in the city.
But 3 1/2 per cent of rural and only 2 1/2 per cent of urban dwellers have enlarged hearts.
Heart murmur occurred in 3 1/2 per cent of rural people and 4 1/2 per cent of city dwellers.
Lung disease occurred in 2 1/2 per cent in the country and 3 per cent in the city. This, of course, is mostly tuberculosis. There is a surprisingly small difference. Eight per cent rural and 9 per cent urban need glasses. Nearly 6 per cent rural and 3 per cent urban dwellers have infected tonsils. This is probably due to better access to medical care in the city.

More germs seem to get into the bodies of city dwellers as noted by the rather undue rate of enlargement of lymphatic nodes. Thyroid enlargements were practically identical. High blood pressure is practically the same in both.

There is the same amount of hernia and hemorrhoids in both groups.
Two conclusions might be drawn from the figures. First: that the pressure of life in the city is not such that it would affect health unduly and second that the medical conditions in the country are sufficient to prevent conditions of gross neglect.

E. B. M.: "Is surgery the only cure for a cystic ovary?"
Answer: Yes.

Worried: "What causes one to sniff continually when sitting reading, or indeed when awake?"
Answer: Probably a mild case of sinus infection of the nose causes the sniffing.

W. F. F.: "What is your opinion regarding a woman past thirty years bearing children?"
Answer: Under conditions of the modern science of obstetrics, a woman from thirty to thirty-five years of age does not have a harder time with her first baby than a woman of twenty.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO
SUSAN went into the bedroom, leaving Roy and Irene alone after telling that young man how dependable he was.

"Dependable, my eye!" said Irene.
"Don't start all over again," Roy warned. "This is no place for personalities."

"Only those Miss Typical Farmer's Daughter pulls, I suppose," said Irene. "And what's this about you going to Staten Island?"

"We're going to Staten Island, Susan and I—that's all," Roy replied. "Susan wants a glimpse of the water and the boats and the skyline."

"While you," said Irene, "feast your eyes upon her."
"Now listen, Irene, you—"

"Oh, come on, let's get out of here," Irene said crossly. "I can't stand much more of this Dumb Dora, farmer's daughter stuff. It's got me down." She walked out into the hall. "I only pray she doesn't overdo it on the air, and make her listeners a little ill."

"What do you mean, overdo it?" said Roy. "The girl's only being herself."

"I wonder," said Irene.
Roy, frowning, watched her disappear down the hall.

Sometimes Irene was too cryptic for him, he admitted. And at times she was also unreasonable and unmanageable. She even made him feel a bit scared and uncertain at times—and one of those times was right now.

Susan rejoined him.
"Do I look all right?" she asked. "Perfect!" said Roy.

They went out into the hall, where Irene stood impatiently tapping the floor with the toe of her shoe.

There followed several hectic hours during which Susan was rushed here, and rushed there, forced to talk herself and listen to others talk—and then she found herself on board the ferryboat American Legion as it chugged across the bay. She and Roy Leonard stood upon the upper deck, with the wind in their faces. They were silent for a moment, watching Staten Island come nearer and nearer.

"Well," said Roy, "you've certainly seen a lot of boats."

"Haven't I?" said Susan. "But it makes me a little sad—seeing those United States flags painted upon their sides. It brings the war so close to home."

"Yes, it does," Roy agreed. "But let's not think of that. Let's think about how nice it is that we've got daylight saving time." He chuckled. "After all, that IS something to be

Susan turned her eyes toward Bedloe's Island.

"A lady with a lamp," she said softly. "How wonderful it would be if she could really light the whole world to freedom and liberty. She must look lovely when she's all lit up."

"We'll see her that way on our way back," Roy said. "I prefer her when she's lit by the sun only. She looks a bit garish when all her electric trimmings are turned on."

Susan took Roy's arm.
"Let's take a walk around the deck," she said. "I've always wanted to do that on a huge ocean liner. I'll probably never have the opportunity, so now we'll make the American Legion do."

"I've never been abroad either," said Roy, as they fell into step. "But I've often taken this trip—like it. Especially at dusk, when you can see the lights of lower Manhattan through a silvery veil of mist or fog."

"Do you suppose," said Susan, "that folk will ever again be able to sail for France, England—fascinating places across the sea?"

"Let's hope so," Roy answered. "Meanwhile, they'll have a chance to see their own country. It's not at all a bad place, you know."

"I should say not!" Susan said. "I'm seeing it now, thanks to Dainty Diana Dairies. She looked up at Roy. "Tell me about the town you came from. I tried to get you to do it back in that little restaurant where we had dinner—but you kept changing the subject."

"That," said Roy, "was because I wanted to hear you talk. And dancing with you was so nice—I didn't want to spoil it by talking about myself. Did you like dining there?"

"I should say so!" Susan told him. "It made me feel that I was really in New York. I've often read about those quaint little places in stories."

"A lot of them are just fakes," Roy said. "But the one we visited does seem to have something. I often get advertising ideas when I go there."

Susan laughed softly. "There you go, trying to change the subject again!" she accused. "Now, about this small town where you used to live."

"It was like thousands of other small towns, I imagine," Roy began. "Wide, tree-shaded streets that are dusty on a hot summer afternoon—places where kids like I was could dig their toes. Whip-poorwills in the evening—still, black nights. And boys and girls dreaming of what they wanted to

"What was it like?" Susan asked.

"Not a large one," said Roy. "Nothing like the Farmer plantation. But plenty big enough to impress a boy in his teens. I used to tell my grandmother that when I'd made my fortune I'd come back and take care of both the farm and her."

"Is that still your plan?"

"No. Grandmother died the year after I came to New York and the farm had to be sold."

"Oh, I'm sorry!"

"But I'm hoping to rent or buy a place in Connecticut," Roy continued. "A place where I can plant things and raise chickens. Maybe we'll get a chance to drive up there."

"I'd love to see it," Susan said. And then: "It seems odd that you should have gone into the advertising business, when you seem so fond of the country and farms."

"I had to make a living," said Roy. "And soon after I got a job with Dainty Diana Dairies, I sort of drifted into advertising. I'm glad now that I did." He looked down into Susan's eyes. "The combination of farm background and advertising is responsible for the contest which you've won. But what pleases me more than anything else is that seeing you, meeting you and hearing you talk, convinces me that there still are girls in the world who are natural and aren't trying to pretend to be something they are not."

Susan tried to think of something to say, and couldn't. But her heart sank. If there ever was a pretender, she was it. Not that she wasn't really a farmer's daughter. No, not that. But she was putting on an act. And she felt a little sick about it, now that she realized how completely Roy Leonard had fallen for the line she had adopted.

For a brief moment she was tempted to tell him the truth—beginning with the evening when she and Fred Mosher had listened to the radio in Fred's car. She was tempted to tell him everything—even about her four-year college course, when she had won high honors, not leaving out the part about how she had been voted the most sophisticated girl in her class. She was even tempted to start speaking to Roy in French, or Italian, or Spanish. She knew that deep down inside of her she was an essentially honest person—and all of a sudden it was hard for her not to open up her heart and make a complete confession.

But she couldn't.

'Moundbuilders' Topic
As Monday Club Meets

Lack Of Current
Forces Change
In Program

Dr. H. C. Shetrone, curator of the Ohio Archeological and Historical Museum located on the Ohio State University campus, was guest speaker Monday at the regular meeting of The Monday Club in the Library Trustees' room, Memorial Hall. Coming prepared with an address on "The American Indian" to be illustrated with slides, Dr. Shetrone was forced by lack of electric current in Circleville to substitute for this talk on the Moundbuilders, which lost none of its impressiveness even if presented by light of hastily gathered candles and almost forgotten lanterns and lamps.

Despite the inconvenience of lack of light in the city, a representative group of club members gathered for the outstanding session.

Dr. Shetrone was introduced by Mrs. Bishop Given, chairman of the program committee, as one of the country's outstanding authorities on Indians. He had intended to talk on ethnology and history of the Indian, with particular reference to our Colonial period, according to her introduction.

In speaking of the Moundbuilders, Dr. Shetrone mentioned the various types of mounds which these prehistoric people left in our country, particularly in this section. More than 25,000 mounds and earthworks in the valleys of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers have been discovered and more or less thoroughly explored, Dr. Shetrone mentioned.

In his discussion of the mounds he referred to the conical ones, used as burying places; the sacrificial and effigy mounds, the greatest effigy mounds in existence being in Ohio; one of these, "Serpent Mound," being thought to have been a place of worship. He talked of people of 'Hopewell Culture' as responsible for the many mounds in Ohio and westward across Indiana and Illinois. The Circle, around which Circleville was originally built, belonged to this group. One of the most important mounds in the immediate vicinity is the 'Seip Mound,' near Bainbridge, in the Paint Creek Valley, which explorers found, according to Dr. Shetrone, to be on the site of a sacred structure of plastered clay which was a burying place, a prehistoric crematory. From relics found in such mounds as these, the scientists have been able to determine more of the history of these people.

Dr. Shetrone pointed out during the question period which followed his lecture that the main stream of the Mongoloid migration from Asia went down the warm Pacific coast to Central and South America. These people developed the Tayan, Aztec and Incan cultures. A few of these migrants, ancestors of the Moundbuilders, came east over our western plains and spread out over our western plains and central valleys where they developed agriculture, weaving and pottery, and their most important contribution to following generations, their cultivation of Maize.

Mrs. Tom Renick, president, opened the meeting by reading an article on "Education" from "The Buckeye," official organ of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs. The annual sale of articles made by the Blind was conducted.

Robtown Class Meeting
The second meeting of the U-Go-I-Go Sunday School class was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson of Nashville with present and former members of the class of young people of the Robtown Church present.

Mrs. Thomas Wardell Jr., class teacher, Mrs. Carl Younkin, president, and Mrs. Raymond Mounts, secretary-treasurer, were in charge of the business of the evening.

The program included three readings by Mrs. Ned Walker, a contest sponsored by Mrs. Richard Hudson, and two accordion selections by Ada Lou Beckett. Lunch was served by Mrs. Wilson, assisted by Mrs. Carl Younkin and Miss Lola Fay Younkin.

The next meeting will be December 10 at the Robtown parish

ALTHOUGH the planetary influences for this day are read as lucky, fortunate and propitious, yet there are factors pointing to the unique, exceptional unprecedented and unforeseen. It would seem as though all the finer faculties and forces were on the quiver to accomplish something out of the ordinary or to indulge in experiences or adventures of strange or curious expression. The creative faculties should be highly stimulated, with imagination, inspiration, intuition as well as the distinctly emotional, social or affectional qualities inciting to dramatic performance. Business and personal matters flourish but there are obligations to assume and differences to compose, harmoniously.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually thrilling year; including adventure and curious experiences, with the keenly heightened forces and faculties seeking expression in drama, poetry, art, music, or some form of imaginative, intuitive, mystical, original or unique creative accomplishment. This may be lucrative, and attended by many social, affectional and artistic gratifications. 'Moundbuilders' Topic

Lack Of Current
Forces Change
In Program

Dr. H. C. Shetrone, curator of the Ohio Archeological and Historical Museum located on the Ohio State University campus, was guest speaker Monday at the regular meeting of The Monday Club in the Library Trustees' room, Memorial Hall. Coming prepared with an address on "The American Indian" to be illustrated with slides, Dr. Shetrone was forced by lack of electric current in Circleville to substitute for this talk on the Moundbuilders, which lost none of its impressiveness even if presented by light of hastily gathered candles and almost forgotten lanterns and lamps.

Despite the inconvenience of lack of light in the city, a representative group of club members gathered for the outstanding session.

Dr. Shetrone was introduced by Mrs. Bishop Given, chairman of the program committee, as one of the country's outstanding authorities on Indians. He had intended to talk on ethnology and history of the Indian, with particular reference to our Colonial period, according to her introduction.

In speaking of the Moundbuilders, Dr. Shetrone mentioned the various types of mounds which these prehistoric people left in our country, particularly in this section. More than 25,000 mounds and earthworks in the valleys of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers have been discovered and more or less thoroughly explored, Dr. Shetrone mentioned.

In his discussion of the mounds he referred to the conical ones, used as burying places; the sacrificial and effigy mounds, the greatest effigy mounds in existence being in Ohio; one of these, 'Serpent Mound,' being thought to have been a place of worship. He talked of people of 'Hopewell Culture' as responsible for the many mounds in Ohio and westward across Indiana and Illinois. The Circle, around which Circleville was originally built, belonged to this group. One of the most important mounds in the immediate vicinity is the 'Seip Mound,' near Bainbridge, in the Paint Creek Valley, which explorers found, according to Dr. Shetrone, to be on the site of a sacred structure of plastered clay which was a burying place, a prehistoric crematory. From relics found in such mounds as these, the scientists have been able to determine more of the history of these people.

Dr. Shetrone pointed out during the question period which followed his lecture that the main stream of the Mongoloid migration from Asia went down the warm Pacific coast to Central and South America. These people developed the Mayan, Aztec and Incan cultures. A few of these migrants, ancestors of the Moundbuilders, came east of the mountains and spread out over our western plains and central valleys where they developed agriculture, weaving and pottery, and their most important contribution to following generations, their cultivation of Maize.

Mrs. Tom Renick, president, opened the meeting by reading an article on "Education" from "The Buckeye," official organ of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs. The annual sale of articles made by the Blind was conducted.

Robtown Class Meeting

The second meeting of the U-Go-I-Go Sunday School class was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson of Ashville with present and former members of the class of young people of the Robtown Church present.

Mrs. Thomas Wardell Jr., class teacher, Mrs. Carl Younkin, president, and Mrs. Raymond Mounds, secretary-treasurer, were in charge of the business of the evening.

The program included three readings by Mrs. Ned Walker, a contest sponsored by Mrs. Richard Hudson, and two accordion selections by Ada Lou Beckett.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Wilson, assisted by Mrs. Carl Younkin and Miss Lola Fay Younkin.

The next meeting will be December 10 at the Robtown parish

Black Names Veterans To Oppose Lancaster

Woods, Valentine, Moorehead, Geib And Moon To Start; Strong Second Five Ready; Reserve Game Is At 7:15

A starting team that is comprised entirely of lettermen was named Tuesday by Coach Roy M. Black to open 1941-42 cage festivities against the Lancaster High Golden Gales on the C.A.C. court tonight. The Tiger mentor chose his quintet after Monday's drill, which was cut short by the 'blackout.'

At the forwards will be Johnny Woods and Chrb Valentine, the former recovering sufficiently from a football shoulder injury to take over

BADGERS START DRIVE TOWARD ANOTHER CROWN

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 2—Wisconsin's Badgers, defending Big Ten and N. C. A. A. champions, today were off to a successful start on their 1941-42 basketball campaign as a result of their 56 to 35 triumph over Carroll College in their season inaugural.

Last night's victory was the Badgers' sixteenth in a row, and after a slow start in which Carroll gained a small lead they were never headed. The built up a 23 to 15 advantage by half time, and in the later stages relied principally on substitutes.

TRADES TALKED AS BASEBALL'S MOGULS GATHER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 2—The trade winds increased in velocity today, but blew up chiefly rumors as the nation's baseball people prepared to launch the 40th annual convention of the National Association of Baseball Leagues.

Nearly every mode of transportation brought diamond magnates, big and little, to the huddle which officially opens tomorrow. Scores of others were already on deck, however, and ever since yesterday have been conferring and huddling over prospective deals for players.

These were launched with the announcement that Pittsburgh's Pirates had purchased Pitcher Henry Gornicki from the St. Louis Cardinals.

President William E. Benswanger of the Pirates disclosed the deal was made following a discussion between Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals, and himself. He declined to say how much he paid for Gornicki, who twirled 13 innings for the Red Birds last season before being sent on option to Rochester of the International League.

The Pirates were involved in the only other official business of yesterday. They announced that Pitcher Truett (Rip) Sewell, who won 14 and lost 17 games for them last season, became the first Buccaneer to sign for the 1942 season. Sewell affixed his signature, then returned to his Plant City, Fla., residence.

Eyes of many talent salesmen were on Larry S. MacPhail, chief-tain of the Brooklyn Dodgers. MacPhail said he had not opened negotiations with anyone, but those with players to sell claimed Larry the Red had more than $100,000 with which to do business.

his post. At center will be Jim Moorehead, who moved from the reserve to the varsity team near the end of last season, and at guards will be Frank Geib and Bob Moon, both veterans of the team last year although Moon performed at a forward a year ago.

Backing up this team will be one of almost equal caliber comprised of Kline and Smallwood at forwards, Carr at center and Jackson and Sabine at guards.

Gerald Ayers Out
The only Tiger hopeful unable to compete will be Gerald Ayers, regular forward last year, who has a ruptured muscle above his knee. He may not be ready for several weeks.

Lancaster's starting five will consist of Mathews and Raymond at forwards; McNaughten at center, and Montague and Miller at guards, the latter football fullback and a strong defensive man. McNaughten is six feet two inches tall, Miller is 5 feet 10; Mathews and Raymond each 5 feet 9, and Montague is 5 feet 7.

Officials will be Harley Pearce and Red Tompkins. Coach Black also designated Clifton and Smallwood for forwards at the start of the reserve game, with Anderson at center and Shea and Sabine at the guards.

The first game is scheduled at 7:15, with the varsities taking the court immediately after this contest is ended.

Season Tickets Available
Members of the High School Stogie Club were making final contacts Tuesday in efforts to sell a large number of season tickets. The tickets are being offered at reduced prices by school officials.

CHRISTO VICTOR IN FIGHT WITH BOLO PUNCHER

CLEVELAND, Dec. 2—Anton Christofidous today held a 10-round decision over Ceferino Garcia former middleweight champion, scoring in decisive fashion in the feature bout of the annual Cleveland News Toyshop show at the arena before 12,000 fans.

Christo, former NBA light heavyweight king, carried a two-fisted attack to the one-time bolo belt, to win every round but two.

Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight king, scored a nine-round technical kayo over Harry Weekly of Alliance, O., and New Orleans, in another scheduled 10-rounder, and Joey Maxin, clever young Cleveland light heavyweight, dach-ed and stabbed him way to a clear-cut 10-round victory over Red Burman of Baltimore, once held forth as a protege of Jack Dempsey.

We've got a little list — we've got a little list — of uncooperative guys who never would be missed.

Jurors To Investigate Another Manslaughter

Probe Of Boy's Death To Be Made During Session

MORGAN, 48, IS NAMED

Fourteen Other Charges To Be Studied By Countians

Prosecutor George Gerhardt said Tuesday he probably would ask the grand jury Wednesday to consider "on information" a manslaughter case against John Morgan, 48, of Darbyville, whose four-year-old grandson was killed instantly Saturday evening when Morgan's car struck a steel road sign on Route 22, one-half mile west of Circleville.

Witnesses who saw Morgan said he was driving when under the influence of alcohol. Morgan remains in Berger Hospital where he is suffering from a broken left leg and a possible skull fracture. His daughter, Miss Elizabeth Morgan, 16, received a badly lacerated tongue and cuts and bruises and was held at the hospital until Sunday morning, when she was released.

Funeral services for the grandson, Francis Willard Coffill, were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Darbyville Methodist Church. Burial by Defenbaugh, was in the Darbyville cemetery.

14 Others Pled

Fourteen other cases will be considered by the grand jury when it convenes Wednesday. One manslaughter case will be heard, that against Dr. Edward Schumacher of Columbus, charged with the death of Mrs. Gladys Rhoades, 36, Red House, W. Va. The Schumacher car and one in which Mrs. Rhoades was riding collided on Route 23 north of Circleville July 4.

SEAL SALE'S INITIAL WEEK BEHIND YEAR AGO

The first week of the 1941 Christmas Seal Campaign finds results running behind those of last year, according to Mrs. George Crites, general chairman. The campaign as a whole cannot be judged by the first week's results, Mrs. Crites explained, but the watchful committee is always eager at least to match the previous year's results.

"National health is a vital part of national defense," according to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service," Mrs. Crites said.

"Christmas Seal committees in all parts of the country feel that they must exert greater effort this year to insure the success of this drive for anti-tuberculosis funds.

"There is no better time than the present to urge America to guard her health against the ever present menace of tuberculosis."

BOARDS SET UP FOR VOTING IN SCIOTO DISTRICT

One week from Tuesday, residents of Scioto Township will vote on an issue which finally may settle a dispute between Orient parents and Scioto Township school officials. That issue will be "Shall the schools of Scioto Township be centralized."

Election board officials said Tuesday that judges and clerks to supervise the election had been appointed and that 950 ballots being printed. Scioto Township folk will vote at two precincts, Scioto North and Scioto South.

Officials appointed for the Scioto North precinct are William Thraill, presiding judge; Dorothy Thompson, judge, and F. O. Kegg and Merritt Dountz, clerks. Officials at Scioto South precinct will be Alvin Hill, presiding judge; Perry Fausnaugh, judge, and William Miller and Norman McKnight, clerks.

In a court litigation between the Orient parents and members of the Scioto board, Judge Phil Henderson of Logan ruled that Orient parents were justified in asking that their school be reopened and he issued a mandamus action against the Scioto Board, ordering it to reopen the school at once.

The Scioto board, however filed notice that it will appeal the case, preventing final action on Judge Henderson's decision, pending the outcome of the election next Tuesday.

Italian Ambassador Prince Colonna, said: "How are you Prince Eau de Cologne?"

Wall Street Wizard Odium in one of his efforts to save "little business", overlooked the little matter of good labor relations. After elaborately equipping three trains with models of articles needed by the Army-Navy to show to little business during a tour of the country, Odium forgot to send any labor representatives along.

OPM labor chiefs hit the ceiling, and labor men are now on the trains. . . . The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will be satirized in a Broadway musical review being written by Vincent Youmans, author of "Tea for Two". . . .

Congressman Sol Bloom, called upon to speak at a dinner for Latin American officials, rose, grinned, said: "I get mixed up between my Spanish and my English."

From another table came the voice of Texas Senator Long Tom Connally: "Can you speak either one, Sol?"

EDUCATED SOLDIERS

Lt.-Gen. Ben ("Yoo-hoo") Lear is going to give the 120,000 officers and men of his crack Second Army an opportunity to learn what it is all about.

The scholarly cavalryman, who fought his way from buck private to one of the ablest top officers in the Army, is instituting an elaborate educational program that will make military training history. Nothing like it has ever been tried on such a scale in the U. S. Army.

As part of their military training, and on training time, every soldier and officer of the Second Army will be required to attend a series of weekly lectures by outstanding educators and experts.

This unique program will run 13 weeks, with more than 400 carefully selected officers and civilian educators conducting the classes. The lectures, totalling three hours a week, will be divided into two general courses: (1) general educational, (2) the organization, functions and operations of the U. S. armed services, Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Corps.

After this basic program has been completed, Lear will follow it up with a one-hour weekly lecture on current affairs by outstanding authorities.

Purpose of the plan is to improve the military training and effectiveness of the civilian soldiers. It is Lear's enlightened view that the American soldier will be an even better soldier than he already is if he has a clear grasp of why he is in the Army and how an army functions from top to bottom.

"In spite of the fact that the American is the most intelligent soldier in the world," Lear explains, "the urgent questions of state that have influenced their lives are but dimly understood by some soldiers, if understood at all. In many instances, this lack of knowledge acts as a brake on the soldiers' interest in his work and a deterrent, therefore, to satisfactory results in his training. This condition is a challenge that the Second Army intends to overcome."

Allport of Harvard, on propaganda methods of totalitarian governments.

Note: General Lear's training innovation has drawn high praise from War Department chiefs and may be ordered in the other three citizen armies.

Jurors To Investigate Another Manslaughter

Probe Of Boy's Death To Be Made During Session

MORGAN, 48, IS NAMED

Fourteen Other Charges To Be Studied By Countians

Prosecutor George Gerhardt said Tuesday he probably would ask the grand jury Wednesday to consider "on information" a manslaughter case against John Morgan, 48, of Darbyville, whose four-year-old grandson was killed instantly Saturday evening when Morgan's car struck a steel road signal on Route 22, one-half mile west of Circleville.

Witnesses who saw Morgan said he was driving when under the influence of alcohol. Morgan remains in Berger Hospital where he is suffering from a broken left leg and a possible skull fracture. His daughter, Miss Elizabeth Morgan, 16, received a badly lacerated tongue and cuts and bruises and was held at the hospital until Sunday morning, when she was released.

Funeral services for the grandson, Francis Willard Coffill, were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Darbyville Methodist Church. Burial by Deffenbaugh was in the Darbyville cemetery.

14 Others Pled

Fourteen other cases will be considered by the grand jury when it convenes Wednesday. One manslaughter case will be heard, that against Dr. Edward Schumacher of Columbus, charged with the death of Mrs. Gladys Rhoades, 36, Red House, W. Va. The Schumacher car and one in which Mrs. Rhoades was riding collided on Route 23 north of Circleville July 4.

SEAL SALE'S INITIAL WEEK BEHIND YEAR AGO

The first week of the 1941 Christmas Seal Campaign finds results running behind those of last year, according to Mrs. George Crites, general chairman. The campaign as a whole cannot be judged by the first week's results, Mrs. Crites explained, but the watchful committee is always eager at least to match the previous year's results.

"National health is a vital part of national defense," according to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service, Mrs. Crites said.

"Christmas Seal committees in all parts of the country feel that they must exert greater effort this year to insure the success of this drive for anti-tuberculosis funds.

"There is no better time than the present to urge America to guard her health against the ever present menace of tuberculosis."

BOARDS SET UP FOR VOTING IN SCIOTO DISTRICT

One week from Tuesday, residents of Scioto Township will vote on an issue which finally may settle a dispute between Orient parents and Scioto Township school officials. That issue will be "Shall the schools of Scioto Township be centralized."

Election board officials said Tuesday that judges and clerks to supervise the election had been appointed and that 950 ballots being printed. Scioto Township folk will vote at two precincts, Scioto North and Scioto South.

Officials appointed for the Scioto North precinct are William Thraill, presiding judge; Dorothy Thompson, judge, and F. O. Kegg and Merritt Dountz, clerks. Officials at Scioto South precinct will be Alvin Hill, presiding judge; Perry Fausnaugh, judge, and William Miller and Norman McKnight, clerks.

In a court litigation between the Orient parents and members of the Scioto board, Judge Phil Henderson of Logan ruled that Orient parents were justified in asking that their school be reopened and he issued a mandamus action against the Scioto Board, ordering it to reopen the school at once.

The Scioto board, however, filed notice that it will appeal the case, preventing final action on Judge Henderson's decision, pending the outcome of the election next Tuesday.

EDUCATED SOLDIERS

LT.-Gen. Ben ("Yoo-hoo") Lear is going to give the 120,000 officers and men of his crack Second Army an opportunity to learn what it is all about.

The scholarly cavalryman, who fought his way from buck private to one of the ablest top officers in the Army, is instituting an elaborate educational program that will make military training history. Nothing like it has ever been tried on such a scale in the U. S. Army.

As part of their military training, and on training time, every soldier and officer of the Second Army will be required to attend a series of weekly lectures by outstanding educators and experts.

This unique program will run 13 weeks, with more than 400 carefully selected officers and civilian educators conducting the classes. The lectures, totalling three hours a week, will be divided into two general courses: (1) general educational, (2) the organization, functions and operations of the U. S. armed services, Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Corps.

After this basic program has been completed, Lear will follow it up with a one-hour weekly lecture on current affairs by outstanding authorities.

Purpose of the plan is to improve the military training and effectiveness of the civilian soldiers. It is Lear's enlightened view that the American soldier will be an even better soldier than he already is if he has a clear grasp of why he is in the Army and how an army functions from top to bottom.

"In spite of the fact that the American is the most intelligent soldier in the world," Lear explains, "the urgent questions of state that have influenced their lives are but dimly understood by some soldiers, if understood at all. In many instances, this lack of knowledge acts as a brake on the soldiers' interest in his work and a deterrent, therefore, to satisfactory results in his training. This condition is a challenge that the Second Army intends to overcome."
